CONDITIONS OF SALE

1. The highest Bidder to be the Buyer, and if any dispute arise between two or more Bidders, the Lot so in dispute shall be immediately put up again and re-sold.

2. The Auctioneer reserves the right to reject any bid which is merely a nominal or fractional advance, and therefore, in his judgment, likely to affect the Sale injuriously.

3. The Purchasers to give their names and addresses, and to pay down a cash deposit, or the whole of the Purchase-money, if required, in default of which the Lot or Lots so purchased to be immediately put up again and re-sold.

4. The Lots to be taken away at the Buyer's Expense and Risk within twenty-four hours from the conclusion of the Sale, unless otherwise specified by the Auctioneer or Managers previous to or at the time of Sale, and the remainder of the Purchase-money to be absolutely paid, or otherwise settled for to the satisfaction of the Auctioneer, on or before delivery; in default of which the undersigned will not hold themselves responsible if the Lots be lost, stolen, damaged, or destroyed, but they will be left at the sole risk of the purchaser.

5. While the undersigned will not hold themselves responsible for the correctness of the description, genuineness, or authenticity of, or any fault or defect in, any Lot, and make no Warranty whatever, they will, upon receiving previous to date of Sale trustworthy expert opinion in writing that any Painting or other Work of Art is not what it is represented to be, use every effort on their part to furnish proof to the contrary; failing in which, the object or objects in question will be sold subject to the declaration of the aforesaid expert, he being liable to the Owner or Owners thereof for damage or injury occasioned thereby.

6. To prevent inaccuracy in delivery, and inconvenience in the settlement of the Purchases, no Lot can, on any account, be removed during the Sale.

7. Upon failure to comply with the above conditions, the money deposited in part payment shall be forfeited; all Lots uncleared within one day from conclusion of Sale (unless otherwise specified as above) shall be re-sold by public or private sale, without further notice, and the deficiency (if any) attending such re-sale shall be made good by the defaulter at this Sale, together with all charges attending the same. This Condition is without prejudice to the right of the Auctioneer to enforce the contract made at this Sale, without such re-sale, if he thinks fit.

8. The Undersigned are in no manner connected with the business of the cartage or packing and shipping of purchases, and although they will afford to purchasers every facility for employing careful carriers and packers, they will not hold themselves responsible for the acts and charges of the parties engaged for such services.

Fine silky pile, woven in pale salmon-pink and yellow geometrical all-over design; the trellised field involving small blossoms in quiet and harmonious blending. Simply bordered in light blue and white, including a plain blue marginal band. Eighteenth Century.

Length, 5 feet 10 inches; width, 3 feet.

484—ANTIQUe CHINESE RUG

Fine thick pile and silky lustre. Narrow panel, with dark blue ground, woven in lighter colors to represent a simple landscape; defined by the emblematical knurled old plumb tree, rocky mounts, fungus patches and serrated lines, implying water-beds. The field is dominated by a yellow stag and blue fawn, together with a flying "fēng huang" or phoenix bird; the former are symbols of longevity and the bird is supposed to herald the advent of a beneficent rule.

Other and co-ordinate emblems are interspersed over the areas in form of three bats (signifying trifold happiness) and other small emblems appear in the cloud patches.

This panel, with natural design, is fittingly surrounded by a formal border, upon which are woven a series of small gnomon-angled panels, bearing the Buddhist emblems (pa chi-hsiang) of happy augury, alternately shown on crest forms, amid flowering leafage. Late Seventeenth Century.

Length, 5 feet 1 inch; width, 2 feet 6 inches.

485—ANTIQUe CHINESE RUG

Fine silky pile, with dark blue panel, dominated by five Buddhist lions (kara-shi-shi) and scrolling leafage; one of this symbolic number appears in the circular centre medallion, amid herbage, and the others are paired off at the upper and lower end of field. Uniformly woven in light sapphire blue and soft white tones.

The panel is framed by a harmonious blue and white border, which shows varied angular vignettes, bearing Buddhist emblems of good fortune, fruit and blossoms, together with the dualistic "yin-yang" symbol. The interspacing being filled with detached flowers. Eighteenth Century.

Length, 5 feet; width, 2 feet 8 inches.

Fine close pile, presenting a deep indigo-blue ground, filled with detached floral sprays and fruit of symbolic significance; woven in salmon-pink, yellow and blue shades of rare beauty. Distinguished among these naturalistic forms are the flowers of the four seasons: (ssu-chi-hua) represented by the prunus blossoms, (mei hua) for winter, peony (mu-tan) for spring, lotus (lien-hu) for summer (dominating); and the chrysanthemum (chu-hua) for autumn. Interspersed among these flowers appear sprays of orchids and young bamboo twigs, clumps of the sacred longevity fungus, together with the fruit of "three abundances" (of years, sons and promotion), the peach, pomegranate and Buddha's hand-citron.

The panel is framed with double bordering, defined by narrow bands in salmon-pink tones; inner border with small everted corners, showing white rosettes on ground of deep blue.

The main border filled with light-colored lotus blossoms, amid blue and white leafy scrolls on a ground of indigo-blue. Outer margin band in dark blue. Early Eighteenth Century.

Length, 8 feet 8 inches; width, 5 feet 9 inches.

541—GRAND CHINESE PALACE SCREEN IN COLORED AND GILDED LACCS

This superb example of Chinese craftsmanship, a production of the late Seventeenth Century, is composed of twelve wooden panels, embellished with an elaborate pictorial decoration, carved and lacquered. The engraved work, both intaglio and relievo, is executed with a virtuosity that involves breadth of design as well as exquisite delicacy of detail. The coloring, which combines the hues of the famille verte, has been mellowed by time to a tonality of exceptional subtlety. The picture proper is enclosed by an edging, composed of multiplied variations of the Shou character, which in turn is framed in a broad black border, profusely decorated with medallions of varied design, including fans and conventionalized leaf and flower-forms. These contain poems, and representations of landscapes, "The Hundred Antiques" and "Eight Precious Things" and the "Flowers of the Four Seasons"; the prunus, peony, lotus and chrysanthemum. It is edged at the bottom and sides with a repeated device of dragon scrolls and sceptre heads. The motive of the scene represented in the picture, with decorative sumptuousness and spirited naturalness, is the imperial palace and its pinnacles on an occasion of ceremony, when the Emperor K'ang-hsi is receiving and distributing presents. The centre of the composition is occupied by the throne-room, whose green, fluted roof, adorned with gilded finials of dragons and flame-forms, is supported upon pillars, colored vermilion to half their height, while the creamy walls are decorated with arabesques, formed of a repetition of the sceptre design. The roofs disappear in the clouds which roll over the whole scene. The Emperor, arrayed in a rosy, gold-embroidered robe, is seated beside a table, laid with gifts, including scrolls, pomegranates and a chrysanthemum in a vase. Behind the throne a graceful young girl holds the handle of a fan, the top of which is concealed. Others, carrying presents, mingle with the groups of courtiers, scholars and magistrates who throng the two ends of the room. On the terrace outside two dancing girls are performing, the head of each being adorned with a decoration like a halo from which project two long antennæ. Their movements are accompanied by two bands of female musicians who play upon the samisen, cymbals, clappers, flute and drum. Meanwhile in the park below, where a stag and stork appear, a nobleman with a bow is attended by a servant carrying a quiver of arrows. Steps descend from the terrace, leading to a gateway the roof of which, decorated like that of the presence-chamber, is supported on four pillars. An official with his wand of office and two men-at-arms stand inside the portal, while two others, holding insignia on poles, stand outside. Here kneels a figure in peasant costume, who is being welcomed by a chamberlain. To the right and left of this central scene lies a lily-pond, surrounded by terraces which are constructed of masonry and surmounted by bamboo balustrades. The one on the left, low down in the composition, adjoins the Palace of the Queen, the halls and terraces of which are animated with the sports of children. On the terrace, overlooking the pond, a boy is riding another pickaback, a third strides a hobbyhorse, and two others, holding lily-pads, are playing at being attendants. Farther off two boys are playing tag, while in a room above them the Queen and her attendants and some children are watching a youngster, as he holds a cock and incites it to fight with another game-bird. Elsewhere a boy is mounting the steps of an arbor, where a teacher appears to be awaiting the lesson, and on an enclosed lawn several children, watched by attendants, are diverting themselves with a ball. The Queen's Palace is similar to the Emperor's in general character and design, but some of its panels are decorated with a fret, composed of the swastika.

Returning to the right of the central scene, the lily-pond is high in the composition. An arbor overlooks it, in which sit two figures, absorbed in the music which one of them is extracting from a loko. Three men, recognizable from their hats as Korean ambassadors, draw near, while on the terrace two counsellors pace side by side, wrapt in contemplation of the beauty of the scene. In the foreground appears another gateway, more massive than the previous one, with one roof above another, the interval being decorated with a grill. An official stands in the portal beside a temple drum, while two censer-bearers are stationed on the entrance steps. Nearby, a pedestal is surmounted by the statue of a fabulous lion. The adjoining enclosure is occupied by a bandstand, in which musicians are playing on horns, a drum and tinkling cymbals. Here in the foreground we see a retinue approaching. Two men on foot, carrying umbrella-shaped insignia, hung with tassels, precede a horseman who bears aloft a large umbrella, decorated with three flounces. They have entered by a gateway where young girls are in attendance, waving banners. It is the first entrance to the imperial precincts and outside appears the handsomely decorated roof of a palanquin, above which fans are swaying. Hard by this entrance a belvidere surmounts the walls, commanding a view of the outside country, where a rocky formation crops out of the level. Two figures, one carrying a present of jade, approach on foot and elsewhere horsemen are drawing toward the gate.

The reverse of the screen is decorated with a magnificent border, corresponding in design to that of the obverse, except that the twelve lower medallions are embellished with spirited representations of the fabulous animals. The space thus enclosed is filled with inscriptions. These state that the screen was produced to order and for the purpose of presentation to Chan Tack Yon, a Premier under K'ang-hsi, the emperor of China, one of China's great patriots and a staunch supporter of his emperor, in recognition of his morality, patriotism and nobility of character.

In beautifully incised Chinese characters it is set forth that "during his (Chan Tack Yon) boyhood days he was most anxious to study, and made a thorough investigation of the Chinese classics, and thereby gained a thorough understanding of the doctrines of Confucius, and the sympathy of humanity in a social manner."

"Owing to his moral education and capabilities he won for himself a position under the government, thus ruling over a district when he was yet young, and held successful positions with the government which he deserved, until he was appointed premier. His name was honored by the people, respected, and is still remembered to this day in a like manner."
